

Group Matching Target tasked by Daz Smith - GM5DS2

Remote viewed by Anita Ikonen - Method EEC

Target 1326-5631

Today May 1, 2018

Start 4:34 PM

Fifth Stage 2. Target 2. 1326-5631

May 1, 2018. Start 4:34 PM.

This isn't a place that is any fun to go to. Someone has been feeling very frustrated here, almost in pain and crying. I feel the torment of an injured person. The person's hand has been stuck jammed into something and then the hand got twisted so it is hurting really bad, the person is suffering from that hand injury. There are tears in the person's eyes from the pain, but the person isn't really crying like sobbing or anything, but it hurts. So this place isn't any fun to go to at all.

There is anger and resentment here. This place has made someone very angry, and I see a big brown bird that stood on the ground with its feet and it spread its wings to the sides but not entirely parallel to the ground just a bit to the sides but not fully and it leaned its head a bit down and opened its beak a bit, perhaps it was a vulture here to eat the carcass of the deceased. But the bird doesn't look normal, because it is much larger than it should be. But I can see the brown feathers that glisten in the light.

This place isn't nice to go to at all. The person who is there is feeling badly injured on their hand, the hand has got jammed and is hurt but I see no blood or any cut into the hand and also the hand is still on the person and is not detached. This place makes someone feel very angry to be here, but they are not crying in an open way anyway and they are not asking for help. This is a bad place to go to.

The person is now on all fours on the ground and is peaking forward into a hole in the ground to see into there. It looks like a small crevice and somebody got stuck down there. There are some supporting beams of wooden planks but somebody is lodged down there, and this guy who is on the ground is going to lower himself down there to him. So there are two people who are going to get in trouble. And the big brown eagle which is too big to be a real bird is standing outside by the entrance hole.

The man fell down the hole, and now he cannot get up, so he is waiting for help here, and he has got his hand injured and stuck between two beams. He looks up from the hole to the sky and he sees eagles flying soaring up high, they must be vultures because of how they circle above over the hole I don't think that eagles do that but I think that this man thought that they were eagles.

Elements mentioned: man who injured his hand, injured hand, pain, abnormally large brown eagle bird, the hole on the ground, the wooden beams, the man in the hole who is stuck.

Let's look at each of these elements now.

Man who injured his hand. He was hoping to go down there, to find some red gems or diamonds that are lodged there. He can find them in the cave, all he needs are the right proper tools to dig them out with.

Injured hand. The hand got stuck somewhere, and it is very sore it is no longer stuck. Some of the bones in the hand seem to be broken or at least twisted. It hurts a lot and the skin on the injured hand is pink and the pain is throbbing and glowing.

Pain. The pain is so great that tears run down his cheeks even though he isn't "crying".

Eagle bird. The bird looks at him, gazes at him closely with his eyes, the eagle tries to extend down a helping hand from its feathered hand to help the man out of the hole. This sounds a bit like an LSD trip I know but that is what I see so work with me here. The eagle wants to go down to him in the hole, the eagle lays its feathered body down against the hole to cover the hole but the eagle does not go down into the hole.

The hole on the ground. Something smells here, it smells like urine here, the man has peed here in the hole obviously cause he is stuck and he can't get out. This was like a diamond cave except that it was for red gems.

The wooden beams. They keep the hole in place, they keep the hole from collapsing and keeps the sand at the walls of the hole from pouring down to fill the hole or to make the hole collapse.

The man who is stuck in the hole. He got to stay there for two whole days and two whole nights and he got very tired and his hand was in pain. He hated when the night and the moonlight came because he did not know if he was ever going to get out of there again if he was going to see another day, for some reason he thought that he was going to die in the night but not during the day, so every night he thought he does not want to die in his sleep. He tried to call for help but nobody came.

The injury is not bleeding, no blood comes out of the hand, but the hand is twisted and it is swollen. But it throbs a lot from pain. Somebody goes down into a hole and he stays there.

Hover over the hole and look down at it: It was not a cave that was collapsed. It was well supported by the beam structures that are simply wooden planks, but anyways, somebody got stuck here, and they couldn't get out and they waited for rescue. The beams didn't support them well enough, and so he got lodged there in between. It really was a tight squeeze, he was looking for red diamonds, and then when the night came he did not know if he was going to survive or make it out alive. It smells really like urine now. He didn't know what to drink, he thought and he hoped that maybe it would rain and that he could drink rain water. But the help never came. He got stuck over his stomach, his stomach is being pressed together by the structure supporting beams that he is stuck in between.

He was supposed to be hoisted down into the cave successfully, by being lowered down with a rope, he would hold on to the rope with both hands tightly and his legs would point diagonally down and forward straight legs and he had a hard hat which has a yellow battery driven lamp on it. In this image the cave looks big like those famous caves that have swarms of bats living in there and you would hoist yourself straight down into a cave room that has a floor which has some water and green vegetation growing on it and it is like a room with a ceiling but a hole in the ceiling for being hoisted down through.

But he got stuck, as he was getting himself lowered. He wanted to find some gold and money down there. So he was a cave dweller.

There were some strange red lights here, those were the red gems that he was hunting. But he got his hand stuck here.

There is some water there, in 5631. The water feels cold and it is not very wide or large at the surface but it falls very deep. This water feels very cold and it has some small waves and motion on it. The water is further down below if you lower yourself down into this hole. The hole entrance is up on ground in the open air by the way.

The water is flowing here deep like a river, it is a strong river flow to the right in my picture. And it swept some things with it. There are no houses or buildings here, but people lived here. The water goes down into another hole under ground. And this water fills all the crevices down there. But once people used to live there in those hole systems, now water fills the holes. If the water were drained out, remnants of these people would be found lying there on the bottom.

What bothers me is that this target and the previous target are starting to seem very similar. I hope switching isn't taking place. The lights go out if you go into this hole cave. Because the battery life isn't forever so the battery runs out. The eagle soars up there in the sky and then it landed to take a look down into this cave but it stays there standing on the ground outside.

What is the significance of the eagle, focus and look at the eagle: The eagle wants to eat the man's meat, so he is waiting to see if the meat can be eaten because it is still very fresh.

Is the eagle perhaps a vulture: The eagle wants to eat him.

Focus to get a visual of the eagle: The eagle wants to eat the man's heart, the eagle knows that the man's heart needs to first stop beating and then the eagle will eat him.

The eagle opens its mouth to pant the air so that it can smell the air better, it knows the smell to know if the man has died and is ready to be eaten. The eagle waits to swallow everything even the entrails of the man.

The man got here, but he didn't ride a bike or ride a vehicle. This was supposed to be just a trek, but then the lights went out because his battery lifespan wasn't forever. And it quickly got cold in the night. So he was desperate. So he cut his own hand off, to save his life.

This place feels like hopelessness, like desperation. Like hunger and thirst also, and like not having a blanket at night to stay warm. And like having to pee your pants. And like having nobody hear your screams for help, but you keep calling anyway, just because if somebody passing by might come and hear it and help you out of this cave.

There are no flowers that grow here. And there is A LOT of dust! The dust is actually dry sand powder that gets up into the air and you breathe it, it even smells of this dust of fine powdered sand, the color of this dust is beige, and it gets into your eyes also.

Go into the hole myself: I don't feel like it is well sitting there. And he had hoped to fill his pockets with gold.

Go to the target landscape and describe where you are: It is very hot outside, but inside of the hole it is damp and moisture and cold. A man is screaming and hollering from inside, he says that he is stuck and that he has injured his leg. He wants to get out of there anytime soon, he wants to get out before nighttime falls, but he is out of luck, he is too late to do that. And night time is setting in.

But there is a big deep puddle of water, this water runs down the cracks under ground and fills up all of the crevices. Somebody went here, to dive under water. He would have had a rope tied to a metal ring on his belt on the front of his belly and that is a guiding rope so that he does not get lost under here. So this place is for cave exploration and it holds the promises of some treasures or valuables here.

This tunnel filled with water is a water cave that is under the ground, the ground above it is made out of rock, there are thin sharp crevices, I will draw it. The rock under ground forms several thin layers of sharp thin rock that are horizontally aligned, as drawn. The water seeps in to fill all of those thin crevices and also some tunnel systems that are horizontal and under ground at those thin sheets. This is a natural structure of course and not manmade.

The hand injury wants to start bleeding, but the skin over the injury has not been punctured, so it gets swollen instead. The man's hand got an injury. His battery driven light lamp has also gone out, and the night is coming in and it is getting cold. He was only hunting those red gems here. He wanted to get into the cave systems to hunt them.

Nobody was happy here, this was a place where to feel very frustrated.

5:24 PM I end it here.

1326-5631