Blue surface rounded shape reminds me of a lake, is lined by what look like rounded white rocks. There are two white poles with a ball on the top end, these sit at a flat board which is either horisontal or vertical, it seems to consist of several boards with left edges that suggest roof design. There is a wood house in beige light-brown color with wooden planks on the outer siding. Trees in the near backgroud. The ground is lumpy and uneven, it seemed to have more of those round rocks with grass surrounding it. There is wind drawn as those curvy lines on the left. No ceiling detected above us in main area so I drew the clouds and sky. Strange symbol or figure drawn on the left was only seen once.
Found was possibly water. Trees, white poles, house seen from outdoors, the board, white rocks, and otherwise as described. Not found were human, animal, vehicle, motion (other than wind blowing in the left). It appears a combination of nature with the small house or cabin.
I create target PDF, two decoy PDFs, and do matching without delay in between.
Matching: I start by excluding the image with the open empty scene on countryside because the house image is a strong match to my report. The image with the bridge and water is a strong match because the board with two poles that I drew and with water looks a lot like that, also there are small houses nearby. However the design of the house in the image with the house looks a lot like the house that I had, the color is exact and the boards across the siding of the house is a good match even though I drew it the other way around. I would pick both of these two images, the water and bridge image and the house image, but I now have to somehow choose one that fits better than the other. I suspect a merge, because the design of the house on the house image is such a good match to the house that I saw. It seems impossible to choose, because both image are a very strong match together. This time I will make a choice based on initial impressions because the initial main impression is always the most important one. The first thing I drew was the blue and then the trees. I decide to choose the image with the lake and bridge, but the match is pretty much equal to both images and I feel that they may have merged into my report.
Outcome: The target image was the one with the house. I state that it shows a very strong correlation to my report, and that merging is suspected since correlation is also from the bridge and water image. I chose a decoy.
