Ground is earth and soil, lumpy and dark brown and somewhat moist not dry. There is a low hill that wraps around in the near distance into-page. Small puddle of water on the ground in the foreground. Large orange-red element which has billowy shapes and excudes heat, when probed reveals a metal pointy cone shaped top as well as a long vertical dark gray cylindrical metal pole within its central core, the outer casing of this object appears white and has dark gray round ring shapes at its top. A brown curved ceiling above us instead of open sky. Reminds me of lava or of a rocket. No humans detected in the area. No plantlife.

Now I get to see the target. Then I create a decoy which I also get to see. No self-matching is done. Target is a tower, and decoy is a portrait photograph of a man.

11:57 AM End session.

I forgot to mention that I also sensed a path which goes from the left and wraps around toward the back of the tall element, it is seen in the drawing.

11:59 AM End session and notes.
