Strong presence of lifeform indicated. A man with some short beard stands there pointing at the other lifeform, a briefcase in his hand. The other lifeform lies down on the ground on all fours and appears to by all means be an animal, first it seemed like a brown hairy dog, but I also saw elephant feet while probing around on the floor. Brown hairs were seen as an independent element, again indicating the presence of human or animal. Into-page is a dark-red-brown wall, there is a ceiling above us not very high up but low. To the left we encounter a fence, to the right we encounter trees and a green area. Out-of-page are green leaves, the leaves that have been drawn in the center of the drawing are actually out of page and not against the elements there. I encountered two human feet on the ground with darkblue shoes on and while investigating this man I found that he wore a blue cap hat and his eyes were wide open and very round and he reminded me a lot of Mussolini, he was very serious and watching keenly, and not in a polite manner. But what all of this mostly seems to me is a zoo. The feelings from this place are absolutely interesting and unusual, I would have enjoyed working for longer on this target but need to keep all sessions about the same with the amount of work I put in them.

Target: Red wall. I recognize the walls, but people and animals are not there. The fence and trees by the way were outside of the target area, I had to look into the surroundings outside of the target landscape.

Decoy1: Blue house.

Decoy2: Hahahaha!!! It is exactly, and not just a little bit, like the man I saw first (before Mussolini when I went up the legs)! I have drawn exactly this face! With that short black beard! Look at how I even drew the white collar from his shirt! This is fantastic! It brings tears to my eyes. This is exactly the face that I saw, though here he has a different (sad looking) facial expression. This is exactly the face and beard and man that I saw. When RV does this kind of things it is magical.

5:04 PM End session.
