The building on the right we can go inside it, it has plenty of empty hollow space inside and it is harmless to be inside it. The crescent moon is wet around it and the moon feels very sharp and also hot, perhaps hot not necessarily due to temperature but maybe even due to electrical or acid chemical, but some type of hot. We have many metal bars, vertical ones and horizontal ones. They have that crumbly iron feel to them, not like hard stainless steel. Wow, I saw a turquoise-green planet with the rings disk (as a disk, not as individual gravel or rings) around it. The floor or ground has many shorter bars or spikes on it. The messy shapes I have drawn in gray and brass color indicate that there is a dense material there, a blockage, and it is not free space or open area, but the color and texture is how I have perceived it.

Target: Open landscape by a road.
