Five search words from random word generator, words are known to me from start of session.

I feel really cold here, snowy, cold wind, mountain region. Pointy alps of gray stone color with snow covered tops and part of sides, the ground is covered by snow. There is a golden glimmer on the back of the element that is on the snow. The element is shaped like a U but square, the golden glimmer is between these two arms or prongs. The prong arms are pointing awkwardly upward.

8:22 PM Secondary stage.

The "snow" feels wet to touch. We have to go to the top of the peak. A small pebble at the top of the peak falls down from there, but it stays hovering between the peak and the ground. The peak top is also pointing toward something. The ground on the hill feels wet. There is the golden item that glimmers or shines or reflects light from it. The golden goes into someone's nose or at someone's nostril and someone sniffed it in to the nose a bit but not all the way in.

It feels very cold here like snow. I probe the ends of the prongs and it feels as if they eject something out of the end like from a cannon. The nose again at the red prongs element. A cold wind brushes across me and continues from left to right over the prongs element and further down the hill on the right.

I choose not to probe further, in order to keep the probing about the same throughout all these sessions.

8:33 PM End RV.

Maybe the colors and shapes of the target image looked like something that reminded me of snowy mountains, and from somewhere the strange prongs element with the shimmering gold and the small item that fell down from the mountain top, but there is no snow and no cold and the correlation is not acceptable. The main color scheme is somewhat good, but overall counting in the incorrect descriptions and impressions I give this session an F.
