Target WR32

Today April 25, 2019

Start 6:59 AM

For this session I tried to go directly to the drawing page without looking at the internet page as the source page. I have worked without writing as a tool. I now present a summary on my findings:

There is a crescent shaped black object against the ground, a person pushes against it from behind it and the object is being used as a cutting tool it reminds me of a guillotine though it is against the ground.

The experience of working without writing was difficult, I feel that many impressions cannot be drawn such as motion and events and I feel that I cannot express myself with only a drawing. I also feel that putting my impressions into words on a page gives them life and weight and lets me continue to work on them. I did some probing on my impressions on the drawing and from the impressions in my mind, but felt that I would have liked to have the impressions as words on a page to probe from, perhaps this is a real matter of fact or otherwise perhaps it is only due to what I am accustomed to.

7:10 AM End RV.

Interesting rendering of the target image onto my page. I have the many black lines and shapes of their clothing or even of the man's curly hair. There are human elements, had I made a written list of elements I would have of course listed a human behind the black element. I think the initial impressions are a fairly decent correlation to the target image, what this session would have needed was a thorough probing of elements. As initial elements it gets a passing grade C. I did do a little bit of probing on elements in my drawing, but from now on I will be writing a list of elements again because the method I have used before makes a systematic probing of elements possible. Grade is C.

7:14 AM End session.
