Target WR52

Today May 15, 2019

Start 10:47 AM

10:55 AM I have to end this session prematurely. I accidentally clicked to open a folder icon on the bottom of the screen, and as I was trying to get it out of the way, I accidentally saw the lower border of the target image on the internet browser window. End RV. It would be wrong to speculate now what I thought it was, because part of the target was exposed, but we can see what I had put down so far.

The bulky bumpy gray ground that I drew reminds me of the cavern rocks. The old man is definitely consistent with one of the statues, or at least that I drew an upright standing figure. The overhang could have been the greenish yellow vegetation on top of the cave, or could have been part of the clothing of the statues. I would have enjoyed taking this further. I give this session a B.

ELEMENTS

IE. There is a yellow synthetic material overhang that is bulging up and has four or so tight corners that are pulled down. It sits up on several brown thin pillars or ropes. The canvas is not going anywhere.

IE. Several brown thin pillars or ropes that fasten the yellow bulging canvas over them.

2. IE. There is something old here. Old and tired, weak and dignified. An old man with the open mouth and a pink tongue.

IE. The ground is boring, this is significant.

IE. The pink tongue of the old man in the open mouth.

IE. There is fish here.
